

Poverty Strategy Commission call for evidence

The Poverty Strategy Commission has been set up to build consensus around the need to tackle poverty in the UK, and to develop a comprehensive anti-poverty strategy.

To inform the development of this strategy, the Commission is starting by gathering research, data and thoughts about poverty from a wide range of organisations and people as part of this call for evidence.

Please complete this form by 31st July.

Thank you for taking the time to complete this questionnaire. If you have any questions or issues, or there is anything you would like to discuss in more detail, please contact secretariat@povertystrategycommission.org.uk.

If you would rather complete this in a different format (e.g. Word) please do let us know.

Your details

We appreciate that people will have different preferences over making their responses public, and we will respect your preferences. Even if you would prefer not to be identified in any material we produce, we will still use themes from your response anonymously and your details for administrative purposes.

How would you like to be identified in any material we publish?

By name of organisation (eg. Legatum Institute)

By type or organisation (eg. "a think tank")

By name (eg. "John Smith")

Please enter your name *

First Name

Last Name

Organisation

Position

Email *

example@example.com

Priorities

We are considering a number of different domains that are relevant to shaping a comprehensive anti-poverty strategy. We would like to get an understanding of people's views of the relative importance of these domains.

Please rate the importance of the following domains to tackling poverty.

Not at all important

Low importance

Neutral

Important

Very important

Incomes

Available assets

Childcare

Housing costs and quality

Costs of disability and social care

Family stability

Extent of social networks and community

Education, skills and qualifications

Financial resilience and debt

Health (mental and physical)

Labour market opportunities

Evidence

The Commission is aiming to build on previous work wherever possible. To allow us to do this, please use the box below to summarise any research you think we should incorporate into our work, as well as links to any relevant source material. Please provide sources, links, references or descriptions of the work. We also welcome documents sent as attachments to secretariat@povertystrategycommission.org.uk.

Please suggest any evidence about poverty you think the Commission should consider.

Please suggest any work you are aware of that considers the viewpoints of people with lived experience of poverty

Policies

Please suggest policies that you would like the Commission to explore as part of its work (please feel free to suggest one or more policies within some or all of the domains below). Where relevant, please provide links or references to related work, or send material to secretariat@povertystrategycommission.org.uk.

Incomes

Available assets - by which we mean liquid savings and investments (eg. rainy day savings)

Childcare costs and quality

Housing costs and quality

Costs of disability and social care

Family stability

Extent of social networks and community

Education, skills and qualifications

Financial resilience and debt

Health (mental and physical)

Labour market opportunities

Other

As part of this call for evidence, your data will be collected and processed by the Legatum Institute on behalf of the Poverty Strategy Commission. Please see the Legatum Institute's full privacy policy here for details about how they collect and use personal data.